

All the rest of them I could hear well. Then the list came out. I had seat No. One. When Stonehouse saw that-- he was a friend of mine, he went and asked that he be given a beginning (front seat) in all the classes. The result was that he was No. 1 in all the ~~classes~~ classes, and I was No. 2 in these two classes, and in the rest I was further back. When Armstrong was lecturing everybody was writing letters or reading other things, paying no attention to him at all except Stonehouse and me. When he would tell a joke he would look over at us because he knew we were listening. But the pedagogy there was just frightful except for Machen. Machen was a first class teacher. Allis was a good teacher. Most of them were just no teachers at all.

Neher: When you say finish this word, they would say a sentence and you finished the word . .

AAM: He would give the first part of the last word of the paragraph. He talked for maybe 6 or 7 minutes and then he would give the first part of the last word of the paragraph and wait for you to finish it! Funny thing.

Neher: Was that to make sure you paid attention to the rest of the paragraph or what?

AAM: I have no idea why he did it. He was a lovely old fellow and I got to be really a good friend of his. ~~Mosek/ot/then/~~ I just didn't do it. Most of them did. The fact the fellow said ~~sta~~ <sup>sto</sup> instead of ~~dishon~~ <sup>dishon</sup> showed that he wasn't getting much out of it.

He had a course in OT Biblical Theology and <sup>a</sup> of course in NT Theology. There was one fellow there who sat in the ~~room~~ room where they had the examination, and they had one set of questions here and one here, and we all took them at once in this great big room. But there was one fellow who reached for the wrong pile.
