

youd call it as that, but I had that feeling about him allthe time there.

He was elected Moderator of the General Assembly. They would have a meeting and the modernists, you know, or the people who honored Erdman when he would come they would all stand up. We had a question: should we stand up in such cases? Was it showing honor to a man which you did not feel he deserved.

I mentioned how Dr. Wilson got me this fellowship to go to Germany. He and Dr. Allis were both very anxious that I go and study in Germany. So I went there. The first day I got there I passed the American church. It had not it the name, pastor, a name I had heard in Princeton enough that it gave me a kind of feeling of being at home to see it though I'm not ever sure I'd met the man. He was Mr. Koontz's uncle. I had dinner with him at the Koontzes just last week and found out that I met him for the first time probably. He had graduated 4 years before I did at Princeton so he did not overlap with me at all. But I had that feeling about him. I must have heard some things about him. It gave me that very friendly feeling to see him. I just found out last week that actually he left Berlin --- he preached three years in the American Church while he was studying there. Then he left a year before I came, but his name was still on there. But they took the name off during that week. I guess the reason they took the name off during that week was because Dr. Dickie the old man who had been pastor there for many years, came back and he decided to install as pastor of the American Church a very nice fellow who was === had been a pastor and was going to be professor of NT in Columbia Theological Seminary in the Southery Presbyterian Church. So I went to the American Church
