

a ~~nd~~ amazing how lacking in discernment most people are. I remember when I was at BIOLA they had a conference at a big congregational church, two or three blocks away. They said this is a conference to bring together science, religion, and education. They had the president of Stanford U. who began his talk with the words: "When man first began to stand upright." They had one speaker who in the most pious language remarked that Jesus was born just like anyone else; Jesus never knew anything but what he learned in school as a boy. ~~TM~~ He said these awful things in such a pious tone, and a couple of old ladies sitting in front of me I heard every time he'd mention Jesus one of them would turn to the other and say, Isn't that beautiful! Isn't that lovely! Then they had the Fifth Jubilee Singers singing. They were singing old spirituals. I don't know whether they == exactly how it fit together, but I remember some precise songs they sang. I think it may have fit together, and so when this an finished his talk they called on the Fifth Jubilee Singers and they sang, It's the Old Time Religion . . .it's the Old Time Religion and it's good enough for me!

Then they had a speaker who said we don't need to be talking about the second coming of Christ. What we need to be doing is to build a great new world, etc. When he finished they sang, Keep ~~it~~ a-inching along, keep a-inching along Jesus will come some day! They had about three times when they . . . but when they got through they leader of the conference said, Oh, this is marvellous. Here we've gotten all the ~~latest~~ latest insights of science and education and then we have these great old songs by the Fifth Jubilee Singers! So we have them all together. Things were sort of chaotic you might say as the big denominations were being taken over. Once the modernists got toleration in most
