

Dr. Samuel Craig. Later the name was taken over by this new group. People read in that my statement and the student's statement and I felt that after that I needed that much vindication. But he said, We don't want to do that. People will just think we are knocking all the time. Then when their attack became more bitter he printed it in the Beacon later on. I have not found it. Not looked for it specifically.

Neher: When you say their attack became more bitter, what do you refer to there?

That's good you ask me for precise                      The feeling we had                      The attitude of most of the students there, they were pretty much conditioned and I can't think of details now.

Perhaps in connection with the IBPFPM -- it was still that spring while I was at Westminster that the issues came up in the Board and in the Independent Board there were women there. One woman had directed a big anti === a big temperance campaign in a city in New York. Wealthy woman. There were two or three women like that. The Board was now controlled by Westminster graduates of people like that (Board of Westminster?) but                      ---- There were women like that on the IBPFPM, there were no women on the seminary Board and when we had a meeting of the IBPFPM they had gotten these women so worked up they were ready to pull hair actually. The bitterness! Terry Whisicar                      --- They had taken this strong stand in their writings about it being perfectly alright to ~~spoke~~ and use alcoholic beverages because you have Christian liberty, and in the Board, --- they had a meeting of the Board in which they elected some new members and I was elected. They had me there to come right in when I was elected. They only succeeded by one vote. Peter Stam who was with us. One of these women
