

for these collectivist tendencies today. If you can find out what the people stand for! Which is often very difficult. I feel that for the Christian to make the major effort of his life to try to effect economic or social systems is just a waste of his time.

To do some is fine. But it's a waste of his time to make it major. When we hear about people like this Sojourner's magazine I just got an add for, people who are claiming to be thoroughly evangelical, Bible-believers but their whole force is, We are going to ~~xxx~~ stand for social justice. Well, what they mean by social justice really means bringing in the kingdom of God on earth which you can't really do without the king here.

And they are playing into the hands of those who are introducing much that is unjust to all of us. I feel that the free enterprise system has produced marvels but most people don't realize it. One of the reasons they don't realize it I think is that 100 yrs. ago there were men with little education but with a great deal of practical sense who stepped out into the business world and made a fortune. And there were other people who were far better Latin and Greek scholars who could teach a class very well and attract by their personality but did not have much practical ability, and they lived in their modest salary, etc.

They looked down the fellow who failed his Latin and Greek and they saw him coming along in his expensive things that he could purchase, and they were grieved about it, and thought the whole system was unjust! So we have had during the last century, starting with a very few I think, and they have reached a few more and a few more, etc. until today our whole educational system is shot through with individuals who are dead against our American system, dead against the free enterprise system.

I read a very interesting statement a couple of days ago by a liberal. He said that the great liberal magazines that had had tremendous influence this last 30 yrs., he said practically every one of them has been financed by someone who had inherited great wealth and their conscience hurt them. Because they had all this money and they did not feel they had any special right to it, and it was the system that was bad and they had given their money to support these liberal magazines!

When I was in college --Upton Sincare wrote a book on the universities in which he told how most of them had wealthy people on their boards, and the corporations are controlling the universities because they have all these men on their boards!! I thought what silly nonsense. They may be putting them on their boards to get their money, but their teachers are tearing down what all these men stand for. Most of these men feel they are doing a good thing in giving their money to a university and helping in practical things, and they don't bother to see what's being taught.
