

how he'd gotten married and came back to church the next day and how surprised people were. He just went on and on. McIntire says to me, What shall we do? I said, I guess we ~~should~~ should have burned those books!

It was maybe 2 or 3 weeks later. Oh, yes, Faucette went down and bought a house at Cape May. Then they found that according to the laws of NJ they would be in the situation that Shelton was or would have been. So they gave up the idea. By that time McIntire had talked to most of the faculty and asked them to move to Cape May. Most of them had told him they would not. Of course as far as I was concerned I knew that with it being like that and not knowing who was going to be president or run it I knew that within a year the whole faculty would be changed and the whole purpose of the school. My idea would be gone and I did not like to see it go.

I felt it was better even under ~~xxxx~~ difficulty to try to start something new ~~xxxxxx~~ that would keep the same ideas and purposes that we had had. So the first they knew about that was when Jack Murray came out in his paper that a new project (was to start). Before that McIntire had come over -- we had our final faculty meeting of the year, an all day meeting and he walked in on it. The first time he'd ever come to one of those. He brought us over a month's salary. We ~~we~~ were 4 or 5 months behind. He brought a month's salary. Then we all talked very frankly to him.

He went to Mr. Curry. Mr. Curry said to him, Everybody there except (he named one whom I forget who he was) was very critical of me. We all talked frankly to him that day. Then he saw this paper, of course.

That's a summary of the main events connected with that. I sometimes wonder whether in my considerations about continuing I hated to see the things disappear that I was interested in. But I -- how much it entered in I can't say, but my son had had one year under that faculty and I wanted him to get the full course under that faculty. I was very anxious for him to get it. I did not know anywhere I wanted him to go otherwise. He had told me before the meeting, Why don't you try to get 2 or 3 of the members who are at a long distance and raise money to bring them here to try to get control of the seminary.

But I knew that everyone of them was practically whatever McIntire said that was it. So under the circumstances the thing to do was to make a fresh start. At my age and after all the years I had been there-- somebody said, MacRae is losing his pension and Cohen was losing his museum. I spoke to the faculty members one by one. It was maybe 2 or 3 weeks before school was over, and was rather surprised to find that every one when I spoke to them was ready to come with us. Every single one. I spoke to them individually. Spoke first to the two they were ready to fire. I spoke to the rest. All were right with me. I was a little surprised at that.
