

instead of the consonants that were actually written. The ordinary Hebrew word for lord is used for God a few times in the Old Testament, but it is used far more frequently for human beings in positions of authority. The King James Version indicated this distinction by writing the word in capital and small capital letters when it represents the divine name, and that distinction has been preserved in this book.