

ceptable, and we refuse to abandon the doctrine of infallible revelation, the only available alternative appears to be the exceedingly weak one of insisting that there must somehow be an adequate answer although we have no idea what it is.