

Dr. MacRae:-- Well, it is true that a dog and a man act physically in many ways that are similar; yet man can write books, he can make plans extending through several generations, he can establish a system of society in which dogs and other animals become instruments. It is never the other way around. The dog, the elephant, the horse and the monkey never write books, establish libraries, or force men to do their will. Man is distinctly of a higher order. Man has something that the animals do not have--an eternal soul. This soul has needs of its own; it was made for eternity, not just for a brief time.

Unfortunately, man has turned away from the Creator who made him, and has brought sin and wickedness into this wonderful world that God has made. As a result, man's soul is headed for eternal darkness and misery, if man cannot find some way to escape from the sin that he has brought into the world. God, who provided so wonderfully for the necessities of earthly life, has also provided what is needed for the life of the soul. An even greater miracle than the miracle of providing earthly life was performed by God when He sent His Son, the Lord Jesus Christ, to come to this earth and die on the cross of Calvary "that whosoever believeth on Him might not perish, but have eternal life." The wonderful provision for the most important type of life --spiritual life, eternal life-- is available for all who will look to Jesus Christ and trust Him and be saved through His precious blood.

It is not unscientific to believe in God; it is not unscientific to see God's hand in the universe; in fact it is darkness and blindness to shut one's eyes to the Creative Power and only to see the results. The more intelligent one is the more he should be able to see the signs of God's presence in the world about him. Oh, that we might each of us look to God the creator of the universe, see His hand in all things, and accept His son the Lord Jesus Christ as our Saviour through all eternity.

Faith Theological Seminary is an independent Seminary, located in Elkins Park in suburban Philadelphia. The Seminary holds to the verbal and plenary inspiration of the Bible and teaches the imminent and premillennial return of Christ. The Seminary is thoroughly American believing that America's greatness is the direct result of principles of individual liberty and free enterprise - principles based squarely upon the Bible and resulting from the Bible's exalted position in the lives of our forebearers. The Seminary stands for these principles and against the widespread infiltration of communists and communist sympathizers into church activities. The Broadcasting Commission of the ACCC in its national radio and television ministry is grateful to God for the courageous and righteous stand of such great institutions as Faith Theological Seminary. The work of Faith, like that of the Broadcasting Commission, must rely upon the giving of God's people.
