So everything that touches the Pacific Ocean belong to Spain by Balboa claiming it by right of conquest; but Balboa didn't live long after that in the midst of the intrigue of his life was soon snuffed out. Now the interesting thing we've noticed thus far about the Spanish discovery, that they were not made by the Spanish Government saying, "Now we want to discover new land and set up a mighty new empire." They were discovered, mou might say (?) 13 by free booters. They were discovered by individuals who had an idea that they could enrich themselves and help their country by finding a new way to India, and then after they got here and didn't get to India, they began to look around for things that might be useful. One very useful discovery that they made in S.A. there was quinine. It was the first drug that was discovered that would as a drug cure a disease. The giving of Keemo-therapy, as the physicians called it, and there was nothing else similar to---

(starting with 1.)

When he got back he saw that the control of Brazil which they had before. It had been under the same condition in the past and it existed for the good of Portugual alone. It could not (1) any other country for when the emperor had actually been there they had had more

(?) and had traded with freedom that other counties, to some extent, but now the Portuguese leaders wanted to stop that. Don Juan his throne it was presty hard for to exist. He was not particularly papular. But his son Don Pedro was quite popular and now when word came about what they were doing ever there in Pert. in Brazil there began to be stormings of desiring freedom for Brazil. And so Don Pedro, the sen, (2) and there he decided that the thing to do was to put himself at the head of the independent movement; so he gave what you call the that was the declaration that Portugual should present Bazil independece.

(?)

(2)

was empererer of Pertugual and Don Pedro I was the emperor of Brazil; and so Brazil received its independence without any change of government. It was an independent nation under the emporer Don Pedro I. And he was succeeded by his son Don Pedro II who seemed to be a very aggressive ruler, but the desire for independence was spreading in Brazil and the threw result was in 1892 there was an uprising in Brazil which through Don Pedro out from being emporer. The people felt very highly of him—he had been fine ruler, but they wanted a republic and he was thrown out, and he was very much hupt by it; so he left for Portugual, never