

Cont. Lectures on Modern History and Civ.

all over. She said, "Why, Doctor Garam, did you make a special trip home for me?" And she was so surprised. He said that after that every time he'd bring a patient to the hospital for the last twenty years--"Why this is Dr. G's patient. You'll have to give special care to him." And so he said that his patients now get the best treatment of anyone in the hospital. Just that little act of kindness which he watched out for the opportunity for, made all the difference in the treatment of the Protestants in that hospital. Well, in Brazil with this there positivist philosophy having been so outstanding in the establishment of the constitution, you can imagine that the general attitude of government would not be strongly anti-Protestant. Missions had succeeded to a very marked degree in Brazil. You still have the overwhelming majority of Romanists, but you have churches of several denominations down in the South in Rio and in the other great city up here in the hills and then up here in the sea particularly, the third largest city. Yes sir? Quest. Yes, that's where the Germans are in Fort Stockler down here. Yes, I don't know much about that area. I stopped there for an hour when my plane was going ~~through Rio~~ to Argentina, so I didn't so I didn't see a great deal about it. I heard about the German culture there, and I talked to a good many Germans, but I don't think it fits particularly in this part of the lecture. They are a small element but quite an influential element in the life of Brazil. Well now it has mentioned there that Dr. G. in R has the largest church there and you have those various Protestant churches even though the Romans are in the majority yet; but there is a very large element of freedom in Brazil. A representative in the Child Evangelism program up there in the North--in R. She said that there is a compound not so far from there where they had a priest who gathered all the Bibles together he could get ahold of, and they had a big Bible burning. And they had a big celebration and burned all of these Bibles. And when that was done people in R thought they would like to go out there and to hold a street meeting and give testimonies in the town where this had occurred, and so they went out and