... and another group of Indians up there who had been conquered by the just shortly before. And the result was that the legitimate son, you might say had a better claim, being of pure Inca blood, represented the two sections--the Peruvian section and the Angorian section, and so these two sons had a struggle and rocked the Inca empire to its foundation.

~~At the~~ ~~while~~ Apahualps. empire, and he was up here in the north where he had defeated the brother and heading down to the great capital which is at Pitts , and they came to one of the little towns there and they heard that the emporer was coming. And Apahualps came and he settled outside the town and Pizarro told him he had come as a representative from the king of Spain, ruler of all this country over here, and ~~that~~ Apahualps was rather amused at his claim to be empedor over all this country over here. when he was the emperor over all of it and he thought that these white people had rather silly ideas. He didn't think too badly of it. He just thought it was just a little fantastic-- So he sent word to him to say that he didn't have time to see him, and suggested that he move away from that area. Well, P. sent another messenger who told Apahualps that he was really very anxious to see him, and that it would be an honoyr to, and tha P. himself was only a very humble servant of the great emperor, and if Apahualps would come and see him that he would be greatly honored and that he would like to carry back word of it to the king of Spain; and so after two or three ^{days of sending} ~~messengers had been sent~~, Apahualps said, "Well, I'll humor him--I'll go and pay him a visit." And so Apahualps took his nobles and they chose sides and very expensive clothing and they came down to where P. was, and they thought that when they see all of our splendor and our glory they'll see how fantastic their silly ideas are ~~that~~ their king of Spain is the ruler of the universe, they'll see what the true situation is. ^{So they marched down there, but} P. had his men all primed what to do and the Spaniards with the men all around suddenly had a signal from P-. The Spaniards attacked the nobles, and they attacked them and killed most of the leaders, but they were very careful not to injure Apahualps. And once they had Apahualps in their hands and he was the supreme ruler of the Incas, they told him that they had no desire to hurt him, but that they were just going to keep him as their guest for awhile. And so they kept him for quite a few weeks, but as they kept him, it was quite apparent to them, though they gave him every honor he was not free to do anything, And Apahualps told them that he wanted to go, but they said that they were sorry, but the king of
