

.....Now you had a question.....AAM: No, the Code of Hammurabi shows the idea of divine revelation.....No, I didn't make myself clear there. I am glad you called it ot ~~my~~ attention. The statement he makes here was that Zoro aster was the first place where we have the idea of divine revelation. Well, now we have the idea of divine revelation in the Bible///~~.....~~2½~~.....~~, but I was just noticing that he said it isn't in Mesopotamia or in Egypt, but they do have evidence, not of a Bible given to them by God as we have, but of a claim that there were revelations given by God. One of thsoe was where Hammurabi codified the law, but he presents the sun god as having given it to him, that is the idea of divine revelation. Thank you for ~~xxx~~ raising the question. Some other question?.....

AAM: Well, we can't say with exactness, because they didn't number years, one year after another, until about 500 a.d., except for one small time, they never used that system, so we can't tell just when it was, but it would be perhaps around 1500 or 1400 b.c. Somewhere between that and 1200 b.c. We don't know the date when Moses....3½....Yes? Moses lived somewhere between 1500 and 1200. We don't know just where, we don't know just when he lived, but the statem~~ent~~ which is made in here about Moses, that Moses gathered together the Yahwist confederacy, that is a statement made here, and that is entirely a guess, an imaginary statement. I mean, there's absolutely no evidence for it whatever. The only evidence, you see it ~~xxxx~~ says, making use of a Yahwist cult as a nucleus, Moses welded the various tribes of his followers in to a confederation, someti~~m~~es called the Yahweh, and ...4... Now that's purely a guess. There's absolutely no evidence for it anywhere. We have nothing from ancient time about Moses at all, except what is in the Bible, and the Bible says that Moses came from the Israelites in Egypt, as one of them whom God sent to deliver them from Egypt. He led them out into the wilder-ness. You see that is purely an imaginary statement, and there was no evidence whatever. Question.....5.....therefore how do we know what the Hebrews believed before 1500 b.c.....^{AAM:}Bh, the first book of the Bible which Moses wrote sometime between 1500 and 1200 tells the history of their ancestry, clear back to Adam.....5½....AAM: It would be entirely possible that he might have, except that we believe that God directed Moses in what he selected to write, and therefore, we believe that what he wrote was true, and nothing that
