

Thus is man. ^{new element is} At various places there is evidence of a new divine beginning, and the statement that they ~~are~~ ^{it} to bring forth after ^{its} their kind. ¹ How much development there may have been within each of these sections, ² we are not told, ~~we have no way of knowing~~ ³ There is development, growth, and progress in everything ^{phase} of life, but there are also definite demarcations between ~~provisions~~ ^{the} or kinds ¹ which God has made. ² Just how ~~large~~ ^{with these} these "kinds" ¹ may be ¹ the Bible has not stated. ⁴ To deny the ^{reference} development, progress, ⁵ change ³ in the universe ^{at} would be absurd and without any scriptural warrant. ⁶ ~~we insist~~ ⁷ that everything develops by natural process from one simple source is of course directly contrary to what is clearly stated ^{in this} ~~in these chapters~~ ^{portion of God's Word}. Thus we must not read into the narrative, nor assume that it is meant to be complete, but we must see what is clearly stated and stand steadfastly upon it. [to 11]
