

I did want to say. One of the great plant morphologists, a studier of plant structure, was Gerbel in Munich, Germany. And I have had the privilege of studying under one of Gerbel's students who was a morphologist and an organographer - he studied plant organs. And he always recalls to me, in his lectures, that Gerbel would lecture time and time again and hour after hour on evolution and plants. And he would finally sum up his lectures and say, "This is what is supposed to have happened. We don't know. No-one was there." Thank you.

Thank you Dr. Speck. At this time we are privileged to make an announcement. I don't take responsibility for this announcement for the parents of these young people. But there's an announcement that's been handed me that the Senior C. E. will meet at Carol E. Smith's house after this meeting. Now we have one more speaker and then we have some questions. So I don't know when these young people are going to get out. But it's a privilege to now introduce one of my teachers. I just took my last exam from him on Friday. I don't quite know how to introduce him because I don't know how I made out on my exam. Mr. Rao is from India. He has his bachelor's and master's degree in Philosophy, he has graduated from the seminary with a B.D. and S.T.M. and is now presently with us on the faculty teaching Apologetics. Mr. Rao.

Thank you George. I have not graded your papers yet but as soon as I grade them it will be in your box. I will take some time before I begin my brief treatise, should I say, to announce that in our audience we have some visitors. And these visitors have come from a very long distance. They come from the same country I come from - that is from India. And the lady there, she is my sister. She is the second child born to our parents and I am supposed to be the ninth. And just beside her is her husband, that is my brother-in-law, and next to him - the man wearing beard - is a visiting student at our seminary. He is going to begin with us this coming semester and I think that over this week-end my brother-in-law and sister they are with me, so I thought I would bring them over to this church and show them the beautiful building you have and introduce them to your pastor and if you would have some time after this meeting, I would invite you to say "Hello" to them. Probably they feel homesick. Just now you have heard these distinguished ~~XXXXXX(XXXX)~~ gentlemen here, the doctors, give their opinions from different points of view - a biologist, a chemist, and a theologian.
