

Evolution fails to account for the purpose and the life in the physical world, then the life in the universe must be the outcome of chance, of fortuity. The moment we grant that there is a purpose in this universe, you will have to grant also that there is a mind behind it. And that is where a personal god is created. But if it is not so, then it is a product of chance. No? If so, then why is the world a cosmos, in a state of chaos? ~~XXXX(LXXX)~~ Why?

already pointed out. Why is there the reign ^{of law} / instead of anarchy? Why could there be intelligence in the product of food matter and the forces of nature?

How could material substance produce that which is non-material? How could by means of purely forces. Thus, you can go on analyzing the teaching of evolution and just try to find out how many questions does it answer? It does not explain. In the first place it does not explain the origin of life. It cannot explain anything about life ~~§~~ - and so on and so forth. But the if it is so that (1.75) philosophy, you will find in the history of philosophy, one part originates today and another school comes up tomorrow with entirely opposite to this school and a third will put together these two and make another school, and so on and so forth. Today we have the Existentialists. The other day somebody asked me in the class if that is true then what will be the next group? And I told them humorously, "It will be non-existentialism." It is possible it may be. And so on and so forth. Then where will we go to look for an authentic explanation in answer to these questions? Man cannot answer these questions. Why? Because by their very nature these questions are eternal. And an eternal mind is required to answer these questions. And these questions have been answered by the One who is eternal. And God has answered these questions. He has answered this in His Revelation.

What is revelation? You should sit in one of his classes - he explains it so beautifully. It is the communication - revelation is communication from one person to another. Divine revelation is a communication from a divine person to a human. Communication of what? Of the things that were not known to man. Of the things which are not acceptable to human mind. Those things were revealed by God in His revelation and those things we find in the Bible. And answers to all these three questions that we have told this evening are answered by this. From where did the universe come from? God created it. Did He create it out of something as the evolutionists would say? No, God created it out of nothing. The word "creation" itself
