

want so long as they don't contradict the Bible, and there's no harm in the world. But if the theory contradicts the Bible, it must be wrong. And if a theory enters into this question - where do we come from, what is our purpose now, what is our goal - and gives an answer different from that of the Bible, then it can be the means of leading people to Hell by causing them to fail to get the Biblical teaching that man is lost in sin, and only through Jesus Christ can he be saved. So I thought what Dr. Speck pointed out was very, very helpful along that line. And Dr. Willetts also in this evidence on the dating. I thought it was very helpful to show this great area in which scientific theories are developing very helpful things, and bringing out very interesting ideas, but how this material does not contradict the Biblical teaching that man was created perfect, fell into sin and can only be saved through Christ. But the word "evolution" in the original sense and the sense in which some scientists use it today, is an entirely different thing and a very harmful thing and a very dangerous thing and a thing which is only a theory which has no solid basis of fact and something which is definitely denied and contradicted by the Biblical statement that God created man to reproduce after his kind, that God created man as a separate creation, that God created man perfect and man fell into sin, and the fall was not a fall upward but a fall downward, and that man is lost in sin and that only through Jesus Christ can man be saved. And so I hope that this symposium tonight has had a benefit in two directions - one direction in helping us to see the great value ~~EX~~ that these scientific studies have for improving our physical life and for helping us to understand the wonderful way in which God has worked in the universe - and on the other hand, for helping us to become more and more aware that there is no scientific evidence whatever that contradicts the clear statements of the Word of God and that there is no scientific proof that man started as a single cell and developed by purely natural processes or that man is developed from the animals, that there is no scientific proof of such a thing as that and that the Bible completely contradicts it and that it is the thing we need is the answer to these three basic questions and the answer to those is in the Word of God. God created us perfect, man fell. Only through Christ can he be saved and Satan is constantly trying to lead us off in something that destroys our faith in salvation through Christ or that leads us to question some statement in His work, which Satan can lead us on to question more and more and then get us to the point where we fail to
