

wonderful it is - I thought - thinking of something I did myself that He can even make the forgetfulness of the simple to work together to accomplish His purpose. He makes all things work together for good to them that love Him. Last week one day I was in a car and I was coming back to Philadelphia and I looked at the indicator on the car and I thought that I could make, I knew that I could make at least two-thirds and I thought I would ride to the entrance to the turnpike and there I would fill it with gas. And so I decided to do that and as I got near the turnpike the clouds were coming and it looked as if the snow that had been predicted for that day might come soon and my thoughts were on that and I said, "I'm going to rush right on for home as fast as I can" and completely forgot about the getting of gas. The indicator was not working right anyway and I completely forgot about the need of getting gas. And so I got on to the turnpike near Allentown and I rushed down as fast as I could and I kept at the limit and the snow did not come and I was happy for that and I was up here not far from the Willow Grove intersection and I didn't know just how far and I was just passing a car, just giving a shove to get by and no power came. I was even with him and then began to fall back behind him. So I knew what had happened. I went over to the side of the road and I thought, "How far do I have to go for gas?" And my guess was miles to the interchange. And I got out and thought I'd go and try to get some gas and it was bitter cold and I didn't like to do it. And I came back and I got in the car and I thought I'd wait. I guess I sat there maybe half an hour and then when I'd just about completely forgotten about it I heard this tap on the window. And I heard a man say, "I guess you're all right aren't you?" And I looked up and there was a man there with a statement, "Repair Service" on his hat. And I said, "Oh no. I'm out of gasoline." "Oh", he said, "I can furnish you gasoline." And he had his big repair car back there and I thought, "That's grand". And I said, "How much is it?" "Well," he said, "The gasoline's a dollar and the service'll be two dollars." He said, "If you had called me it would have been six dollars. But since I'm just going to another one it'll just be three dollars." Well he put it in and I thought he'd rush off to his other call. But no - he said to me, "Start it up and make sure that nothing else is wrong, that that's really what you're stopped for." Well I knew it was but I went ahead and I started up. I started up and still he didn't go off. He stayed behind me and
