this summer but this will be your property. This belongs to you. What you produce on this land is yours except that you give a certain set percentage of it in to the common treasury to be used to pay back the adventurers who had put their money to bring us over here. So they set to work and he said -- The Gov. says in his account, You just can't imagine the difference. He said before that some of the big strong fellows said, Look, we are working all so awful hard, and what are we getting for it. Look at these other people who are not working half as hard and some of the people were saying, Well now, we've got a big family here, why aren't they helping us like they should. Others said, I just have a small family, Why should I have to work so hard to help them. If a communist sort of organization would ever work properly, certainly the time when you could expect it to work would be when you had a group of such wonderful Christian people as these, as wonderful a group of Christian people whom you would find anywhere desiring to work out the Christian graces in their lives and in their hearts and yet they just could not get along with it. They had barely enough to get by. It is just like the situation we have today where in Russia with those marvelous lands, with three times the land they == that we have here in the US they can't grow enough wheat to feed their own people. They have to buy tremendous amount from free countries with the free enterprise system in order merely to survive. Well they found this out by experience there in Plymouth/ And the Gov. said, It is just difficult to imagine ~~this~~ the difference, when these people had this land and what they produced would be theirs, he said, the whole family ^{want} ~~went~~ out into the field == the men the women the little children, they worked from early mornign till late night, he said. The way those people toiled, and he said that year they had plenty to get through the year enough to make a substantial payment on what they owed in Eng. and enough to be in good shape through the next summer up till when the next harvest would come in. And ~~wo~~ with the change in their economic system they were able to proceed and to go on. Now the colony there at Plymouth, it was only a small group of people. A few more came to them. They were poor people. They had a particular idea of their services and everything and the could not find ~~many~~ ministers that had their idea. They had difficulty in getting good ministers. Eventually they joined in another colony with ideas ~~diff~~ differing considerably from their. Humanly speaking there was not a great success to it.
