

universe theory. According to this theory, the universe ~~is~~ keeps on ex~~pan~~ding for a certain length of time and contracts for a certain length of time. Thus, pulsating in and out according to an unknown rhythm.

Each of these ~~is~~ theories is an ~~interest-~~ interesting attempt to explain the condition of the universe as it ~~is~~ exists today. Each of them, however, is incomplete. If we take a look at the big bang theory, it gives no answer to the question, where did the original football-~~ce e-~~ come from? What is the origin of the tremendous concentration of energy that suddenly exploded, and What ~~is~~ caused the explosion? Who established the rules by ~~is~~ which the elements were formed and by which the process continued.

If we ~~is~~ look at the other two theories , the situation is really only a little different. Either the steady state theory or the pulsating universe theory logically raises a question which ~~is not-~~ is not mentioned in the article. According to each of these theories, if we were to go back 10,000,000⁰⁰⁰/years, the ~~is~~ universe would be approximately the same as it is today. It might be in an expansion or a contraction period, if the pulsating theory were followed. If the steady ~~is~~ state theory were adopted, it would be, like today, an expansion period. In ~~is~~ either case the general situation would be very similar to that that we have today. ~~Ever-~~ If we ~~is~~ went back 20,000,000,000 years , it would still be the same . If we went back a 100,000,000,000 years, it would still be the same. How far back ~~is~~ can the human mind go. There must have been a beginning to it somewhere . There must have been one ~~is~~ ~~was~~ who formed the process and started it in operation whether he started it as a concentration of matter that existed or as a situation already in process. In other words, all ~~the-~~ three of these theories are quite incomplete without recognition of a great being who thinks and wills , who has created the universe and who now controls it. Man knows in his heart that there is a creator. It is
