

was laid on the fact that one was the son of David. Here-w- He was the son of Abraham. The relationship to the father is the thing that is stressed in the pedigrees and in the statements and in the relationships mostly in Biblical times . Even in our own times, the child bears the name of the father, and I've been amused several times recently to notice how very often the characteristics and the qualities which the child shows are those that come from the mother. The mother has ~~such~~ such a tremendous effect upon him , but the mother's name is forgotten. The child goes by the name of the father. The ^{mother's} child's name is rarely to in after time. I was over in Scotland this summer, and we went to the MacRae region where the MacRaes came from, and we ~~fin~~ found dozens of MacRaes . Nearly everybody was a MacRae in that section, and I went to a place to get lodging for the family and I mentioned to a woman, we were about 6 miles away from the main headquarters of the MacRaes , Kintail, we were in * I mentioned to her that we were from the MacRaes of Kintail, my father's ancestors left there about 120 years ago, but I mentioned that we were from the MacRaes of Kintail and that ~~wex~~ we were glad to come back and to see ~~where~~ something about where the family came from, and oh , she was so interested . She said, Oh, I'm a MacRae from Kintail; my husband is a MacRae from Kintail. She was a MacRae before she was ~~xxx~~ married. And ~~six~~ now she's a Mrs. MacRae. She said the MacRaes are the most clannish of ~~the~~ all the clans. She wouldn't let us pay anything for our lodging there. She ~~xxxxx~~ told everybody that her couzings from Philadelphia had come, and was so happy. But, you know, when I thought about ~~mmmm~~ my father and ~~their~~ his brothers and their very typically Scotch names and I mentioned those names to her. She said, John, my father's name, that's a MacRae name, she said, but then when I mentioned his brothers she said Oh, those aren't MacRae names at all, and she told me the MacRae names . Well, my father's mother was a McClain from another part of Scotland, and the relatives I've come in contact with mostly have mostly been McClains, not MacRaes. I think ~~it~~ that with my father the effect of his mother was far greater than the effect of his mother. That's often the case, and yet it is the father's name that we
