AAM I believe it's very important we study two ways: we study extensively and intensively. It's good to take a very small section and study it in great detail. But if you only do that you won't really understand the parts. It's good to study it as a whole and read rapidly. If you only do that you will miss a great deal. I think -- it's the same way with learning a language. I would not move at a steady pace. I would do some fast and some very intensive. I think you need both approaches and I think that's very important for the Christian.

Aldrich Anything to add to that Professor Taylor?

TVT Yes, I was just saying kind of humerously, Where would/be at a funeral without the ~~Psalm~~ Psalms? I say it humerously.

/suppose ?

Aldrich I was trying to what is the easiest thing for the Christian to read just generally because they are so poetic and moving.

TVT A few of them.

Aldrich A lot of difficulty. I know we all have our favorites. Dr. Dillard one last comment and then I'll ask to bring this all too short show to a close.

Dillard ~~I'm~~ I'm sorry Ken, I can't but agree with what Dr. MacRae has already said on that. And I have not a word to add.

Aldrich I think it's been very helpful and at least I think we've got people thinking. We could not possibly exhaust the meaning of the OT in a few minutes. But it's been a pleasure to have had gentlemen of your knowledge and acumen and ability to discern and interpret Scripture to share some of the fruits of your work(?) with us. Thanks so much for being with us on Dialogue, and I hope we've gotten people to be interested in that first part of God's Word. Thank you.
