

a body when the body is at its very first stage of existence, or after it has actually been born, or at some different point, if that be God's will. From human observation I see no way ~~xxxxxxx~~ the decision can be made, nor do I think it likely that one should say that it must always be exactly at the same point in the development of the body. Surely God can do whatever He chooses in this regard