

...you have to admit that many, many of the so-called discrepancies have been solved, and that within the last ten or twenty years. Now how do we know but that the rest will be solved in time. (13) (record unclear to end (14 3/4)

5. (1 1/2 )

...it would be interesting to know what that was, very interesting to look at, because

(several people talking...)

(2) Student: Could I speak to you more about the apostolicity of the Canan? "

Yes.

Student: Is it possible that the apostolic authorship which is perfectly clear in the majority of the books, of the N.T. books, by the fact of the internal evidence of them-- "

Well now according to the (2 1/2)

Student: No one would doubt that. I mention for further consideration that the apostles approved the writings of one another. Peter called attention to Paul's writings and approved them. And Paul quotes from Luke also. But I'm not trying to build an argument on that but merely to raise the possibility that those facts, though they are incomplete, could very well be a process, or part of a process, to which you--which you have sketched. "

Yes, that is, the apostles had an authority in establishing the general conducts and directions.

Student: Or here (?) (3 1/4) O.T. scripture and they said here are some more books on the same level. And there was a new start made, but it was made clearly and definitely and firmly accurate. "

Yes, the apostles may have had a big part in establishing the attitude of the church toward the N.T.