

Prophets 12.

In the case of Ezekiel we have the first two chapters of the book devoted to the wonderful call which God gave to Ezekiel to be His prophet, and to know God in a remarkable way and to give the message which he would give. b. Although we do not always have a record of such a call, we do find in every case that the prophet is conscious of having received a definite message from God which he passes on. The prophet is not simply someone who has some wonderful ideas and some great impulses. He is one who is conscious that he has received a message from God and he passes it on just as conscious as the Western Union telegraph boy is that he has been given a telegram to deliver. I'll read that one again. Although we do not always have a record of such a call, we do find in every case that the prophet is conscious of having received a definite message from God which he passes on. Yes! (Discussion with student)