

It seems like a dream, that you ever were in this position. The enemy is compared to a dream in v.7, but then v.8 the enemy is compared to a dreamer. A hungry man dreams and behold he eats. Who would that be? That would be Sennacherib, wanting to take Jerusalem, wouldn't it? He wakes and his soul is empty, he wakes and there is nothing there to do ~~w~~ it with. So is the multitude of all the nations that fight against Mt. Zion. Sennacherib expects to take it over, he wakes up and ~~he~~ can't do it.

It is gone like ~~a~~ dream. Yes? I don't know as they'd be necessarily mercenaries, but they might be conscripted troops, the "all the nations" here, you don't get that impression, where you read about their coming, from different places, the Assyrian army was a tremendous big army. We know the Assyrians had conquered many nations, and it would seem not at all strange if they included in their army people from different nations. (stu.) ...

...brought out a book called, Early Prophecies of Isaiah, and then he got a book called the Later prophecies of Isaiah, and these were both very full, and telling the views of many people, then later he got out a book on the, a commentary on Isaiah, in which he abridged them, and left out a great deal of valuable material, and I thought it was his abridged edition which they had reprinted, but from what you say, it would sound as if it was the full edition, wouldn't it? Of course, it's possible that he might have in his abridged edition have kept full on certain vital sections, he might have done that. I'm not sure, but at any rate, you say he gives the views from all those
