

and choose the good, for before the child shall know to refuse the evil and choose the good, the land that thou abhorrest shall be forsaken of both her kings. Very interesting suggestion, but now how old is Shear Jashub by this time? He is told to go and take him, to take Shear Jashub with him, it's a little hard to imagine Isaiah carrying a babe in arms going for a momentous meeting like this. It would seem, the suggestion is, that he is at least old enough to walk along. And it would sort of seem as if you ought to have a (5) you don't have a in the Hebrew, do you?

Before he shall, something to point to, before He and he points to Shear Jashub, but if you don't have any evidence of any such thing, it would ~~be~~^{seem} more natural to have it fit with the previous-- (5 1/4. stu) Yes, well there are cases where you have to do it, I don't think there is any ~~q~~uestion, but you need some evidence. There are cases where the context seems very definitely to require it, but there aren't a great many. But it does seem to me that they have put their finger on the true situation, in saying this, that v.14 is Christ and nothing else. I don't see how v.14 can possibly refer to anybody other than Christ. And that v.15 and 16 refer to that time, and nothing else. I don't see how 15 and 16 can possibly refer to Christ. I don't know of any way to make 15 and 16 refer to Christ. So when people--we have three--what's this, Mr. Miller? I mean that's my inclination is to say, that you don't know when that child is going to be born. This true sion of David is coming, you don't know when. Well, since you don't know when, assuming (6 1/2) if he should be born before he would reach this state, this would happen. Well, in that case, you're using a measuring stick to compare the life of a child, but no difference whether that child was Christ, or Napoleon, or anybody else, I mean it doesn't, there is no relation to Christ, and it certainly is not born to them, so I feel just about exactly that way, that it is a measuring stick which is being used (7) But it's more or less hypothetical. (stu) Well I would say it is the predicted one, if he should be born now, using it for a time measurer. We're not saying he will be born now, but we haven't
