

E document and J document. The only real difference between them is that E says God, and J says the Lord. Otherwise, they are almost identical. But then according to the theory ^{came out} the J document ~~was written~~ about 850 B.C., E document about 750. According to the theory there ~~was~~ ^{were} redaction~~s~~. Redactors were men who took them and put them together. And he put them together and in doing that he did so skillfully that you can not usually tell where one ends and where the other begins. So, they say JE, they do not usually say, "J or E," but they say JE, because JE is a combination of J and E. Then according to the theory JE were put ~~g~~ together sometime around 750 B.C. And then about 622 we read in the book of Kings how Josiah had a great reformation, and in this great reformation which Josiah carries out there was a book found in the temple. And this book condemns the false worship and ~~out~~ all through the land, and it says, "They shall worship God at the place which God has appointed." And Josiah went and destroyed these other shrines, and ~~laid~~ all the worship at Jerusalem. They say this is D document, and what Josiah had found was what we believe to be the whole Bible, Moses' law and which in the day of his ^{wicked} father who reigned for 50 years, and his grand father who reigned 50 years of wickedness, and ~~who~~ ^{ed} turned away from God, and they say ^{no} it is a book which was forced to the prophet, and ~~was~~ pretended to ~~be~~ ^{the pe} have been handed down from Moses, and was actually written by ~~people~~ in Jerusalem who wanted to get all these incomes from temples, and therefore ~~had~~ had them worship in Jerusalem instead of different places throughout the land. So that the D document they say is ~~a~~ ^{the} book of Deuteronomy. That belongs to later centuries along with other books. So this is the D document at about 622 B.C. Then they say 100 years or more after that when the people were in exile, there was a group of priests who wrote a new book, and this new book
