

of this sin. I suppose that these other things would be the men at their station for we know they are mentioned first.) What does the English word conceive mean? How would you define it? (To conceive is an English word which conveys the conception of producing.) You can make it more definite than that. (Creating, originating.) Could you say that God conceive Heaven and earth? (No.) You see the English word conceive has two meanings. One meaning, our common meaning of conceive in English is to think of an idea. Form a concept. Devise a plan. It is a ~~simple~~ ~~manaculum~~ mental aspect. Now in Old English the word conceive was used a great deal and is in the Bible, I was conceived in iniquity. In sin did my mother bring forth, something like that, David said. In the Old Testament conceive, in modern English conception is used, which is entirely different from conceive and conception, the idea of having a problem in mind. Well now, they are entirely two distinct words, ideas, and I believe that if we look in Young's Concordance we will find two different Hebrew words translated conceive, let me do that. In the Old Testament the word conceive is used in the English Bible approximately 40 times of which only one (14) and all the others are translations of Hebrew ~~m~~ words which mean to be . So you see that the early Conceive is very different from our modern conceive. Our modern word, conceive is used once in the Old Testament. In Old English, the word conceive is used these many times. Now in the New Testament the situation is quite similar. Conceive is used there in a physical sense in most cases, except Acts ^{5:4} it is translated where it translate τεκνοποιε, "Why hast thou conceived this thing in thine heart?"
