

#71

HE said, if Lincoln lived here today, he would stand by ... ~~with him~~ absolutely , and ... How do we know this? Why, he says, Lincoln signed the Emancipation proclamation without a moment of hesitation... perfectly this is where he would stand, if he were here... Well, I thought ... I do not care if he is... because Lincoln sat a whole day with the Emancipation proclamation in front of him, hesitating, and wondering whether he should sign it or not. And in fact, one of the generals/^{who}said/ ... he removed the general from the office, because Lincoln got out/ the Emancipation proclamation... which he thought might advance a war at that particular point, and the question was, Would this proclamation help the war? ... was a tremendously vital thing to do, and whether it is wise or not, he considered the matter the whole day. And that being the history of the situation, to say that Lincoln never considered the matter, and he immediately signed that proclamation, and today Lincoln would ~~be~~ stay right ^{down} on the line with the Labor Union, is ... So, you can see he was a Democrat, but he had thousands of people who came and listened to him, . He had ~~such~~ tremendous followers. I believe there are some today, too. ~~They still come to his tomb'~~ ~~him~~... But for the ~~at~~ last thirty years, I have hardly heard of him... but the last thirty years, hardly anybody heard of him. The Roman Catholic Church... Everybody thought he was ~~was~~ such a great teacher, thousands of people followed him, and thought of him such a great teacher and such a tremendous leader, such a tremendous figure, but back in 1935, well, they said, what happened to him? What did he accomplish? What did he amount to? Who shall declare his generation? He has no children, He has no posterity, either in spiritual sense or physical sense or any other sense, as far as great influence is concerned. Of course, that is not altogether ... But at any rate, this tremendous influence that he exerted had disappeared. That is exactly what the disciples thought of. And many people