

very vociferous in their attacks against it, attacks with which I disagreed, but I was not then a member of the ~~Board~~ board, and I did not feel /inclined to enter into argument with them. They talked very freely in my presence and they said that the membership of the board was very bad. ~~It~~ They said that a great majority of the members were pre-millennialists, and that of these a very considerable number were dispensationalists. /~~Going through~~ Going through the list they indicated the ones they /considered to ~~be pre-millennialist~~ be premillennialist and the ones those they considered to be dispensationalists. As far as I could see then the only difference was that the ones those who were nominally premillennialists but not particularly interested in the subject they labeled as premillennialists, while any who felt strongly enough about it to be ready to discuss it vigorously they labeled as a dispensationalist. I did not see much ~~the~~ reason for using such a term the ~~it~~ term in such a way.

~~It~~ In subsequent years I have had many friends who have had others that the difference between them is extremely slight.
