

strong disagreement, and, after considerable argument, they were unable to agree on what they meant by dispensationalists and the matter was simply dropped and he was received into the presbytery. Some of the leading Presbyterians and supporters of the Reformed Faith through the ages have been premillennialists, and attack is not openly made against premillennialism as a rule, but hidden under this term "dispensationalist" "dispensationalist," which in my opinion yields far more heat than light. While all those who support it stood together in the foundation of Faith Seminary were premillennialists (sentence construc?) this was not the basic reason for starting the seminary. When we started Westminster the attitude was that people could hold either view they wished and I was constantly referred to in telling premillennial donors that they could support the seminary because I was on its staff. Yet I was teaching Beginning Hebrew and other languages for seven years, and my views on this matter never had a hearing. When I had the conduct of the leading courses in OT^o it became, and it did have a hearing, it became evident that there was a real hatred against them, (who?) (the dispensationalists?) and that during all this time, in other calasses, the faculty members had been constantly attacking premillennialism, while the institution was being represented to the world as taking no stand one way or the other on the matter. I never thought that this was right, and, ~~not~~ seeing the animus and hatred against premillennialism, for which I could not see any adequate cause, I ~~was~~ felt the proper thing, when we started Faith Seminary, to have be definitely and clearly premillennial.

It was a great relief to me to be out from the situation in which I had been very miserable for three or four years. It was also very nice to have complete control of the internal workings of the seminary. I had seen many things ~~that~~ I liked during my eight years at Westminster and wished to ~~perpetuate~~ perpetuate them. I had seen matters that I did not like, and I was able to seek means of remedying them. It was a very profitable and intresting summer as I (nc) a great deal about many things. help ~~in~~ in connection with it. He and I talked together a great deal about many things.
