

and working it out and there are principles at work which have not yet even been discovered with all the discoveries that we have made of the human eye.

We find this order not only in the body of the human being but also in all of the creation. The wonderful order and design: there is a mind there working, planning, directing, controlling. Look at the plant sphere where the leaves on a tree are arranged according to a mathematical formula. How easy it is when we get a few facts to think that we can reason enough from those facts and figure out what other facts will be. Sometimes conditions vary for a person. If iron becomes heated it expands. There must be a little space between the rails in the railroad tracks so that when the iron rails get warm from the sun they can expand and not buckle up, and when it gets cold it contracts. Practically every substance that exists expands
