

seems to him a rather unlikely thing. Emotion                      The heart is something that is actual, real. Use the term ~~before~~ more for thinking. I doubt they had a precise                      for thinking. I believe psyche is trans. heart.

Question: ~~Does the body the body~~ When a person dies, does the body die and the spirit leave, or does the spirit leave and the body die? You hear people & say it makes no diff. how I live                      when the Lord comes                      call me.                      Does it depend on the way we live                      longevity ~~longevity~~

Question: The vs. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, soul, mind, strength." Strength . . . soul                      different? I conceive the heart as being the whole personality, which if you broke it down would be soul, mind and strength and possibly other & break-downs as well.                      is that which encompasses the entire personality?

I doubt it. It might.

Question: A verse that would be fitting to conclude our discussion. For now we know in part and we prophecy in part.

I think that is very applicable. That to me is one of the great needs in this world. To take the great things of the Bible we know and are sure of and stand on them, but == and let's have fellowship with all who accept them, and let's advance and promote them in every way we can, but on the things where people draw inferences let's give charity and not be dogmatic. Let's distinguish clearly between what God has said, and the modes we make of our experiences in relation to it. We can be sure that our body is not imaginary; it's not the seat of sin. It something which should not determine what we do or be our objective, ut should be an instrument to serve Him. Now Mr. Taylor has something he wants to say to you.
