about any human institution. Since the Bible constantly speaks of God as our heavenly Father, it is proper that we should compare heaven with our earthly homes. In fact a truly Christian home can rightly be called "a bit of heaven on earth".

Specialists in juvenile delinquency declare that a large number of those young people who fall into crime ~~and~~ come from broken homes. Lecturers bewail the widespread deterioration of home life and show that in the past such a tendency has led to the fall of nations. It is important for the welfare of our country, as well as for the growth of Christian believers, that Christian homes be maintained.

The home is a gift of God. Genesis 2:18-24 describes its beginning. God created Adam and then created Eve as a suitable helper for Adam. They were told to be fruitful and multiply (Gen.1:28). They were happy, enjoying all the blessings that God bestowed upon them. This institution that God had founded was to become the agency for bringing blessing into the world and for continuing the human race.
