example for us ~~if we want~~ to deal with people, not to slam a thing in their face in such a way that we disgust them and they won't listen to us any more, but ~~to~~ give in a tactical way, to give it frequently, to give it clearly, but to get the thought to them to the point where they realize the need, and then once they realize the need, they can begin. The answer without^{the} need is _____ . And so here we are getting this _____ that there is no peace for the wicked, yet Israel is going to have a great peace, since God is going to bring them back from exile. But how long will this continue? because ~~there~~ is no peace for the wicked? And now then, the, uh, there is no question within the next verse the servant speaking. These three verses is absolutely certain that the servant is speaking, because He speaks in the first verse, and now you can raise the question. In verse sixteen, who is speaking? You don't find a satisfactory answer. Anybody reading verses fourteen and sixteen except the servant, but until you think of that, you will think of different possibilities, and you are just not satisfied, but here there is no question, because he says "He has ^{said} ~~said me~~ to me, Thou art my servant, oh Israel, in whom I will glory. _____ shall be the one ^{who says} ~~to/whom~~ God says, this to him, is ~~the~~ the servant, and the servant is Israel. That is absolutely clear. Verse two which is a part of the soliloquy that runs from verse one through verse three and on further. So, now, the servant speaks to the distant lands. This fits with what we know the servant already. The servant is here to be God's representative in establishing righteousness throughout the earth, and then bring light to the gentiles. So, he starts immediately speaking to the gentiles. He is not speaking to Israel. "Listen, O isles, unto me..." They often use that to greet distant lands of the isles. "Listen, O isles, unto me; and hearken, ye people, from far; The Lord hath called me from the womb;..." This is ~~explained~~ a plan made long before the servant ~~was~~ is born. This is God's plan from the very beginning. Well, Jeremiah was
